Curriculum Vitae

Currently in my fourth year studying Architecture Design and Urban Studies, I discovered my interest in Architecture through exploration of college programs. As an avid potter, I try to apply my design skills and foundations to those of houses and other structures. The past three and a half years have opened a new world to me, and I am determined to continue cultivating my abilities within the discipline. I have just finished a semester overseas in Copenhagen, where I have gained international experience that has strengthened and diversified my skillset.

Joint – Street Mekka

Course : Architecture Design Studio [Copenhagen]

Timeline : Spring 2026

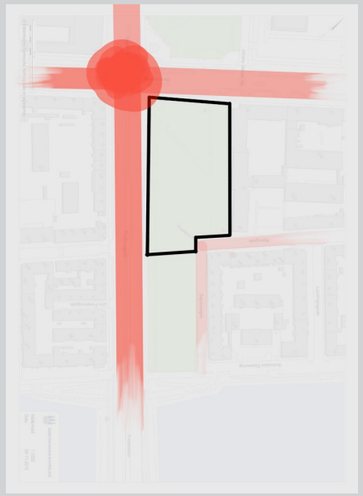

Joint explores tension between the individual and the communal through fragmented form. Its form emerges from surrounding courtyard patterns and path networks, translating local spatial logic into a composition of offset volumes. Circulation and planes intersect to create moments of connection within an otherwise irregular and shifting whole. Unconventional, disjointed window placements reinforce this condition, expressing difference while maintaining a shared spatial identity.

Spaces

Concepts

Joint strives to break away from the conformity of daily modern life. The spaces created by the buildings and streets in the neighborhood are irregular, but still serve as gathering spaces, and this translated to the irregular shapes found throughout the building's form, social spaces, and facade.

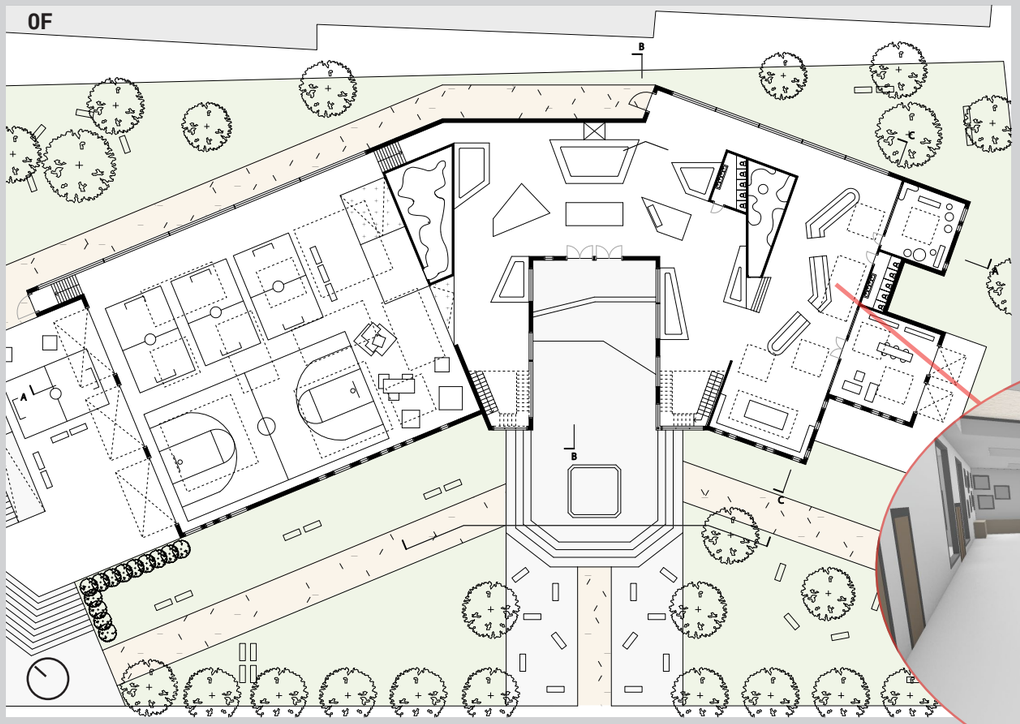

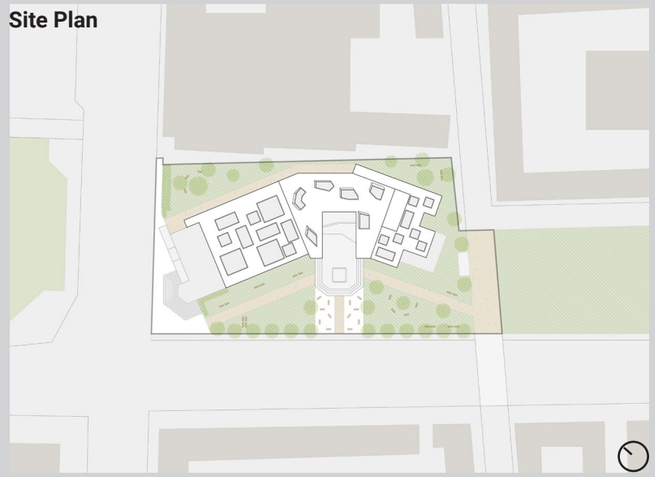

Drawings

The interior design of Joint calls back to the philosophy of breaking away from conforming spaces. Hangout and seating areas are irregular in form, and private rooms contain unconventionally-shaped furniture.

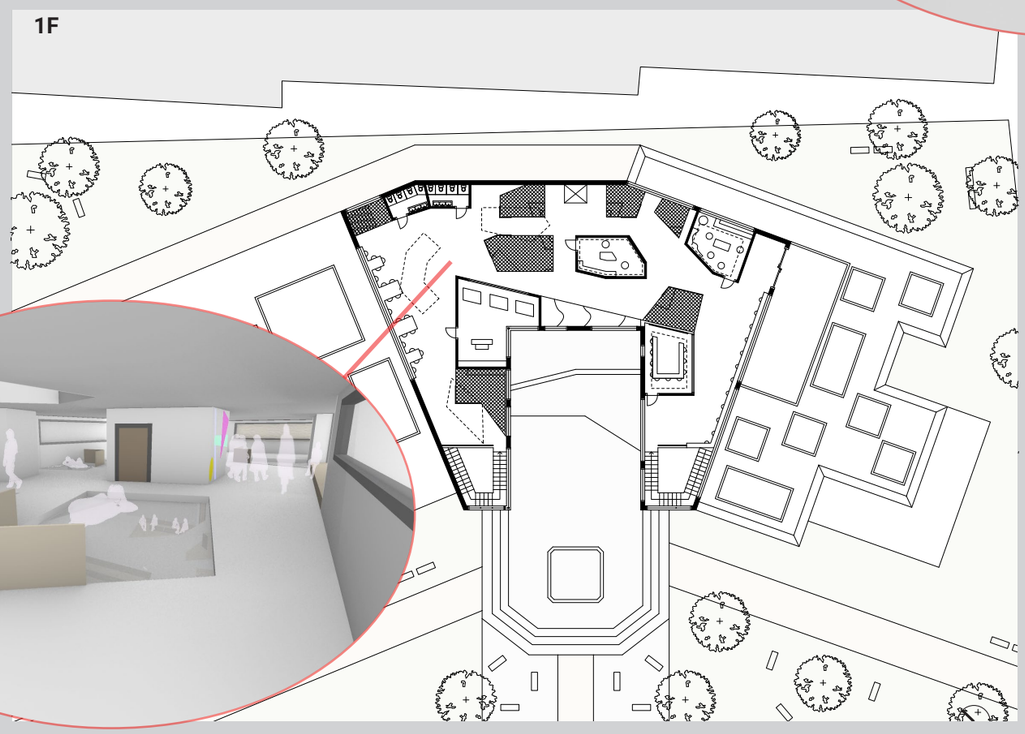

The building's key features include a series of nets designed to provide 'hanging hammock' spaces, 'secret' rooms which are accessed by hidden jib doors, and conversation pits and platforms.

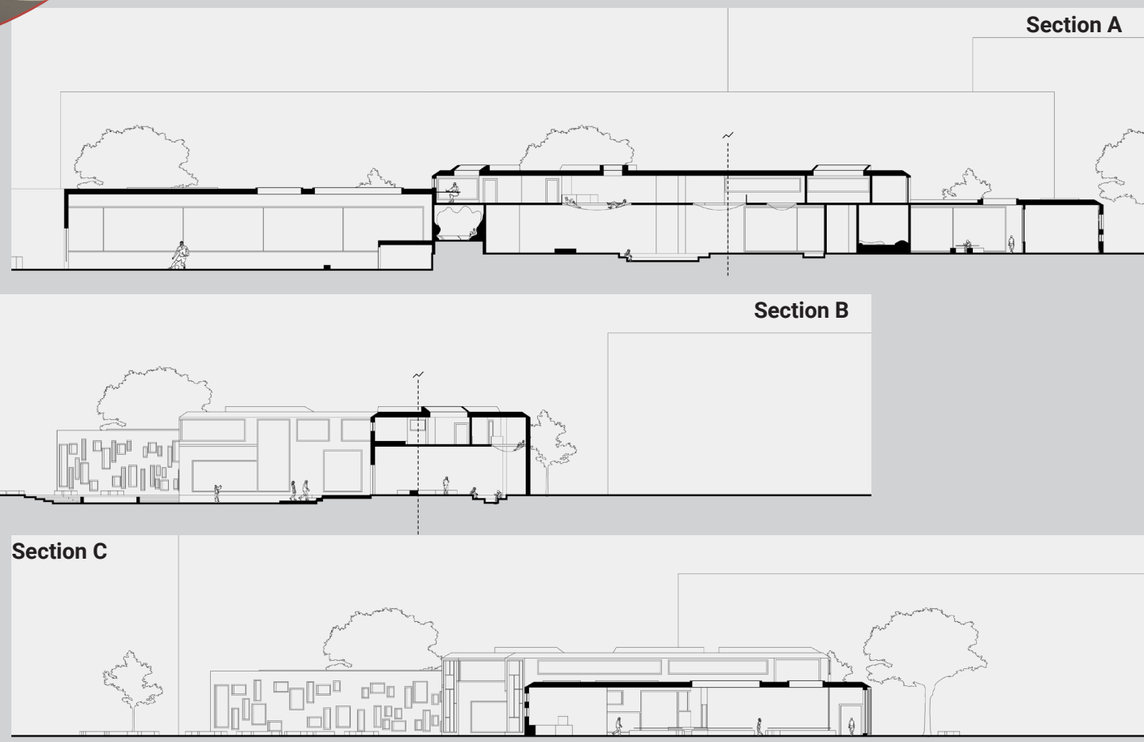

Frontier Sauna

Frontier Sauna is a retreat for solitude and contemplation within Copenhagen's harbour. Organic forms shape circulation, drawing users to intimate spaces. Public and private areas are distinct, yet remain intertwined through continuous movement. Swimming and kayak areas open the complex to a revitalized harbour. On the southern edge, the sauna overlooks the water, prompting stillness and reflection.

Course : Architecture Design Studio [Copenhagen]

Site & Concepts

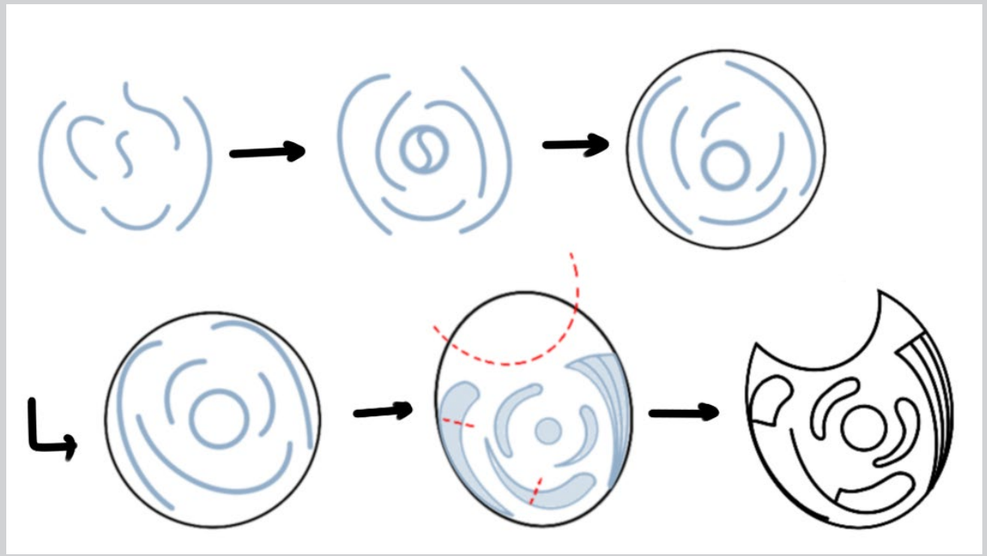

A visit to the site produced three points of analysis that drive Frontier Sauna's form. Path of the sun, contrasting urban layouts, and population+noise density. Nokken Strandvej is a recluse for those who want to get away from the bustle of Copenhagen, whether to run or sit on the piers. Lacking the same attention as the nearby apartment complexes, nature has begun to reclaim parts of the area. Frontier is a floating wooden platform, positioned off shore to further its 'distance' from modern society.

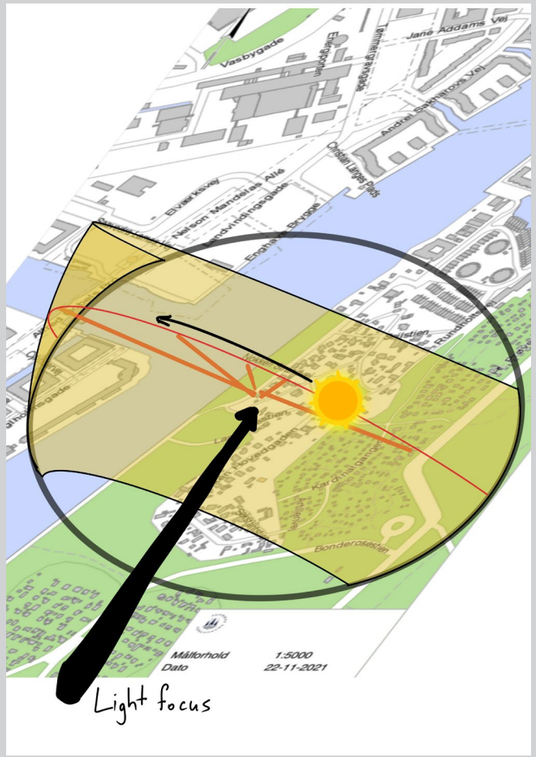

Form in Concept

Derived from the motion of a whirpool, Frontier's curves are integral to both its circulation and facilities. Some portrude upwards, others dip into the water.

Site Analysis

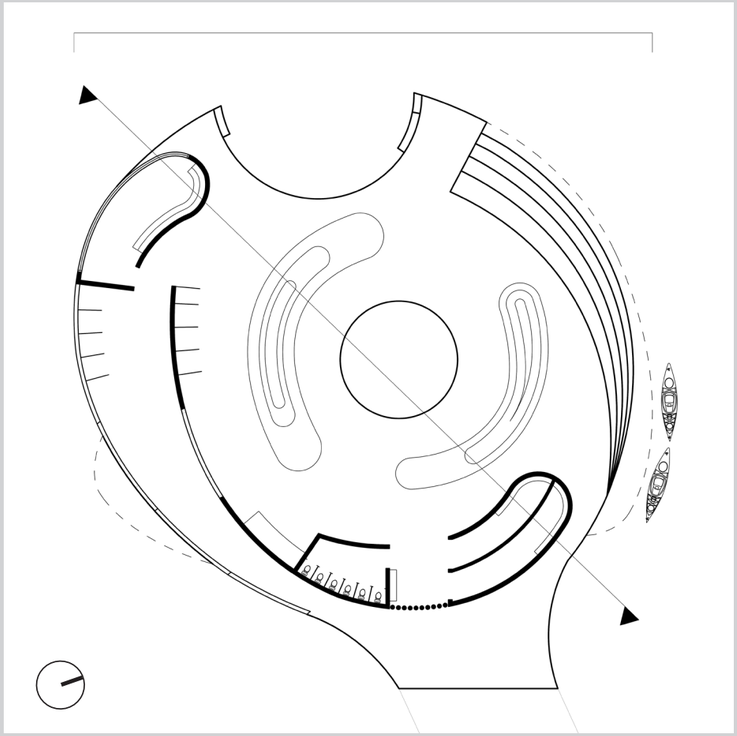

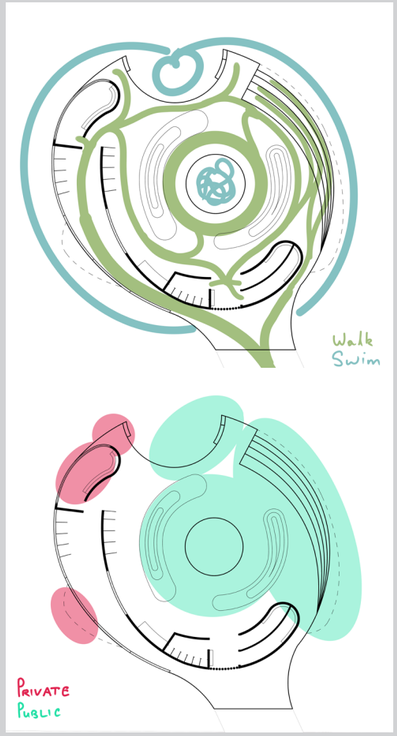

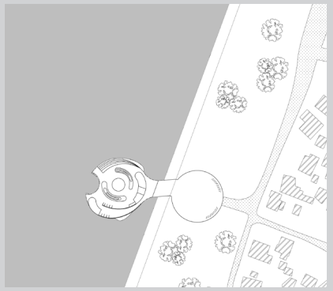

Drawings

While simple in program, Frontier explores the idea of movement through form. The experience through circulation weaves through different programming. Both swimming and walking embrace circular movement, and are interchangeable. Key features include a central dipping pool, diving bay, and topographical benches.

HGXDesign – Felice

Timeline : Summer 2025

During my summer at HGX, I worked on a number of projects, most notably being the restaurant Felice. My task was creating simple models and renderings that would provide the client a general idea of the space as it was designed. Felice's most notable feature is the system of load-bearing columns, which are re-used from the previous tenants to add character. My renders also imagined a new vent system laid atop the bare ceiling framework.

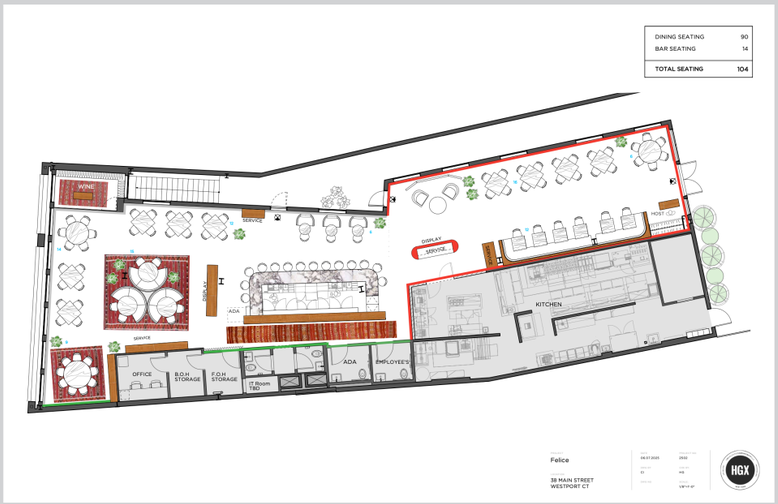

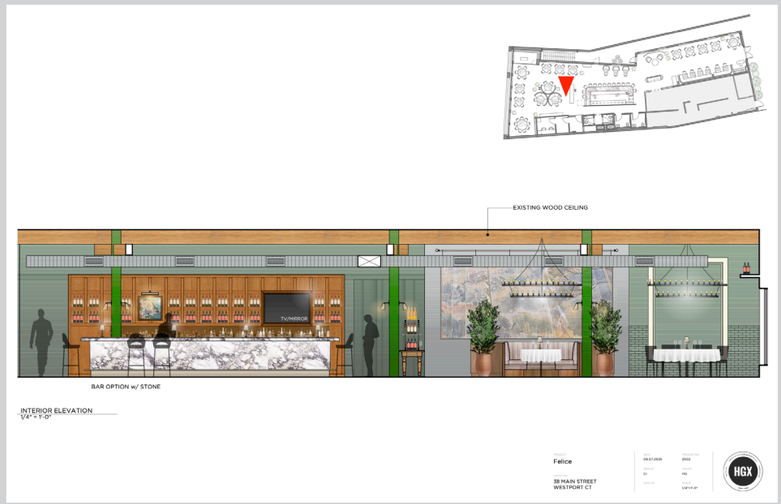

Pottery

Pottery is one of my greatest passions in life. I believe that art directly leads to someone's soul, and pottery is a medium where the use of my hands directly connect that art to my soul. I take pride in my ability to create, and desire to learn new ways to communicate with not only my soul, but other people's.
